Calculate Your Residential Electric Baseline Allowance

This calculator shows you an estimate of your baseline allowance and how your electric usage is divided among the four rate tiers. Have your SDG&E bill handy, because there is information on your bill you will need for the calculator.

Factors Affecting Your Bill

What are the factors affecting your baseline?

You can experiment with the calculator by changing the factors that affect the costs you pay for electricity usage. You will see how these changes affect the baseline allowance number and subsequent energy use (which is divided up into percentages of your baseline allowance or tiered usage.)

Summer And Winter Seasonal Rates

A change in season (summer and winter) will affect results for the months of May and October because part of your energy usage may cross over into both seasons.

The time of year. What month would you like to calculate?

The type of service you have. In order to determine what type of electric service you have we need to know:

How do you heat your home?

Notice "Electric Heat" Selected

How do you heat your water?

Number of billing days for that month. This can be found under "Energy Usage History" on the first page of your monthly bill.

(27 to 33 days)

Total monthly electric usage (kWh). This can be found under "Bill Period" on the first page of your monthly bill.

Your Baseline Allowance and Monthly Electric Usage

Baseline Calculation	Tier	Usage Amount
Baseline	Tier 1	912	912 x $0.08467 per kWh = $77.22
101% - 130% of baseline	Tier 2	274	274 x $0.10858 per kWh = $29.75
131% - 200% of baseline	Tier 3	203	203 x $0.25373 per kWh = $51.51
Over 200% of baseline	Tier 4	0	0 x $0.27373 per kWh = $ 0.00
Total Monthly Electric Usage		1389	1389 Electric Delivery Total $158.51

Month to month your allotted baseline allowance can change due to differences in the number of days in your billing cycle.
